- ▶ In the High/Scope approach adult–child interactions are very important, both in small groups and individually. Large group time should be meaningful to the children and limited to a small amount of time in the daily schedule. Children plan their learning, do or interact with the learning in small groups or individually, then come back to group time to review what they did and learned that day. High/Scope is based on the research by Dr. David Weikart. High Scope has a 46–year history of success.

Traditional 4-K

- ▶ Traditional 4-K takes a play to learn approach on learning.
  - ▶ We play lots of games and songs to help us learn. We also work on learning centers to help build fine motor skills, and gross motor skills.
  - ▶ We have a section of time that they choose where they want to play. They plan out where they want to go, what they want to do, and explain to us what they did while they are in that center.
  - ▶ We also have nap time.
